

The Sisterhood of WEH

If I want to find the Goddess in myself, I must look for it in each of my Sisters, and when I cannot see it in one of them; I will know that the same barrier blinds me from seeing it in myself.

As I come to know each of them, I may or may not play their "game"—but I will not judge it. Through total acceptance of her and the charade that she has chosen to play out in this lifetime, I can study myself and my own charade. If I am impatient, critical, or angry with any one of them, I will use this to better understand my own programming.

Most important, I know that there is no way that any one of them can ever hurt me because through my unconditional acceptance of each one, I strip her of her negative transference power over me by my refusing to place any personal, negative judgment upon her motives.

I separate in each of my Sisters, her true God-self from the "actress," her Essence from the role that she is playing this lifetime. I will attempt to resonate with the pain of each and, thus, come closer to understanding my own human condition and the false beliefs that I have held about my own limitations.
